Dear Parents / Carers

In our letter to all parents and carers about the closure of the school due to electrical issues, we committed to provide you with a further update tomorrow, Friday November 2nd. We will still do this tomorrow, but in the interim we also want to provide an update on the actions to address the issues.

The electrical engineers working on the issues have identified a solution which should effectively bypass the current school systems to provide the school with a resilient and reliable electrical supply. They hope to complete the work to install and test this solution tomorrow.

Alongside the technical works to address the electrical supply issues, we have been working with the school to secure alternative education provision arrangements for all pupils should these be needed next week.

We will write to all parents and carers again tomorrow to confirm whether the education provision will re-open at Fullwood next week or whether we will be using the alternative arrangements we have developed instead. Should it be necessary to introduce alternative arrangements for educating pupils next week, we will include a detailed summary of what those arrangements are in our letter to parents tomorrow.

Again, we would like to apologise to all pupils and families for the break in your children's education and the resulting challenges and frustrations that this unplanned closure will have caused you.

Yours sincerely
