

ALUMNI

Chris Balestrini left Kenilworth School and Sixth Form in 2010 with superb GCSE results and an A* in Physics, As in Biology and Chemistry and went on to Brighton and Sussex Medical School where he loved every aspect of his medical studies and he has completed his degree this summer.

He took a year out at King's College London, where he studied regenerative medicine and innovation and he also spent 10 weeks at a Hospital in the Seychelles. Both of these experiences gave me a very different view of medicine and helped me decide on my specialism. During his placement in the Seychelles as well as visiting a different culture, different hospital system and different diseases he then decided on a different specialism. So now he is back in England he has moved to a new city (Liverpool) where he has just started his foundation year at the Royal Liverpool Hospital in Colorectal Surgery

Nest week we will find out how the two other Balestrini brothers are getting on.
