

ALUMNI

Many siblings have all attended Kenilworth School and enjoyed their time here. We are starting by seeing what the Miller family of four boys have been up to since they have left Kenilworth School. Graham, the eldest is the first to tell us what he is doing now in his own words.

After leaving Kenilworth School and Sixth Form in 2001, I spent a brilliant 3 years at Exeter University where (amongst other things!), I studied Computer Science and French (and also had a year living and working abroad in Switzerland which was a lot of fun).

After uni, I moved to London and managed to get onto a graduate programme with Deloitte, where I spent the next 4 years working as a Management Consultant, and working for various clients including BP and the BBC.

Realising after a while that working for a huge firm wasn't really for me, I then joined a niche Programme Management consultancy called Moorhouse where I spent another 4 years, doing work for BT TV and the Royal Bank of Scotland, before working on the BMI merger for British Airways.

A few years ago, I decided to stop working for other people altogether, and set up my own business, allowing me greater choice of who to work with and when! It has allowed me to spend more time with my family - my wife Kate and I now have a 10 month-old who manages to simultaneously keep us busy, sleep deprived, and of course, very happy.

In my line of work, I could never have started without all the great experience I've gained over the years, and I've been fortunate to have also enjoyed it all along the way. My time in Kenilworth at the School and Sixth form was no-doubt a great foundation, and I have brilliant memories and have stayed good friends with lots of the people I grew up with. We organise a trip away each year with old friends from school - this year we're celebrating our tenth anniversary!
