This is the final update from the two youngest Miller boys: Nick and Ed. Both young men enjoyed their time at Kenilworth School completing both GCSE and A levels before heading off to university. Nick has just started a new job as a structural engineer in Leeds after travelling round South East Asia for 4 months on a bike. Ed is working in London in emerging technologies and 360 virtual reality applications. His latest one being in the medical field called Open Simulation which in this case means that Ed and his business partner have created a low-cost Laparoscopic simulator that runs on your mobile phone and a cardboard kit.
