In the next of our Alumi series we introduce Neelam Gill who recently left Sixth Form.

Neelam attained very highly achieving As and A*s in English Language, English Literature and Psychology and had a deferred place to study Psychology at university in London. During her gap year she decided to try her hand at modelling and her career has flourished since then. She has modelled all over the world, Europe, Dubai, India and the States and has been described as the first British Indian to break into top flight modelling. She is now the face of Abercrombie and Fitch and as well as catwalk modelling for numerous labels, Neelam has been a key part of campaigns for Top Shop, ASOS and Burberry and was awarded the Harper's Bazaar Best Dressed Celebrity in September of last year.

As well as her modelling career Neelam has found time to make some documentaries for the BBC - 100 Years of Vogue magazine and one on cyber-bullying and trolling - she also appeared with Nick Grimshaw on his breakfast show talking about her experiences of trolling. She has also had time to develop a Brow Kit which she launched at Liberty's of London last year. She has worked with Kayne and Zayn Malik, has attended prestigious dinners and award evenings - such as the Prince's Trust - where she was presented to Prince Charles. She is often asked to parties and film premieres - the latest being Zoolander 2.

As well as appearing on the cover of Vogue Beauty, and Glamour magazine Neelam has featured in Marie Claire and has made contributions to newspaper articles about her experience of modelling and was recently featured on the front cover of London's Evening Standard paper. She has also appeared as the #INSTWOMAN in the Sunday Times's Style magazine. Neelam manages to juggle her busy schedule well and finds plenty of time to spend with her family and friends.
