

ALUMNI

Freya McCarthy studied Geography, English Language and Business A levels and her passion for Geography meant that she went on to study Geography at the University of Portsmouth. Freya has decided she wants to work in the area of conservation, hopefully combining her lifelong love of animals with her love for her subject, so after graduating from Portsmouth she went on to study for a Masters at the University of Bristol. She has further continued her passion for all things geographical by continuing her studies at the University of Western Australia. She is using every opportunity to see all her geographical studies in real life and the very different land features and wildlife that the Antipodes has means that Freya is now travelling around New Zealand and Australia. She has not completely decided what she wants to do since completing her degrees but is spending her post university gap year travelling and making applications – she wants to stay in the field of geography and conservation.
