Robin Hood and the Silver Arrow

"Congratulations!" shouted Prince John, shaking Robin Hood's hand.

"You will get what you deserve!" replied Prince John angrily.

"It is a real treat to see the prince?" answered Robin Hood, nodding his head.

"Get off the royal fingers?" complained Prince John crossly.

"I will make the winner the loser!" exclaimed Prince John, pointing at Robin Hood.

"I sentence you to death!" declared Prince John.

"Please Please Sir, don't kill him!" cried Maid Marian anxiously.

"Why should I?" asked Prince John loudly.

"Because I love him!" cried Maid Marian, begging Prince John to not kill Robin.

"I love you more than life, it's sad?" replied Robin Hood, confidently.

"Traitors must die!" shouted Prince John, angrily.

"You're not the king, the crown belongs to King Richard!" exclaimed Robin Hood.

"All hail King Richard!" argued Robin Hood, cheering and waving his hands.

"Long live King Richard!" cheered the crowd, jumping up.

"I am the king!" cried Prince John, angrily.

"Off with his head!" declared Prince John.

"Oh no?" Maid Marian said sadly.

Robin Hood and the Silver Arrow

"Congratulations you get what is coming to you," lied Prince John, standing up waving his arms.

"It's great to meet you Sir," replied Robin, shaking hands happily.

Pulling his hand back towards him, angrily, Prince John declared "Relise the royal finger!"

"I knight you the winner or more appropriately the loser! Seize him," remarked Prince John, pointing at Robin maliciously.

"Prince John," cried Maid Marian sorrowfully "please let him go."

"Why should I do that?" asked Prince John stubbornly.

"Because I love him," begged Maid Marian, putting both hands together gently.

"Does this prisoner return your love?" asked Prince John curiously.

Opening his eyes romantically, Robin told Maid Marian that "I love you more than life it's self."

"Traitors must die!" shouted Prince John boldly.

"Long live King Richard!" screamed the crowd heroically.

"Off with his head!" declared Prince John, stomping on his chair madly.
